

AIRPORT DINING GUIDES

Where to Eat at Sea-Tac International Airport (SEA)

Thursday, May 23, 2013, by Julien Perry

Long security lines, grabby TSA agents, and flight delays are slightly more bearable with good food and drink in your belly. Here, a round-up of a few choice dining options both in Sea-Tac airport and in the surrounding area. Note that all of the dining options in the airport are past security. While most airport fare is chain-dominated, these are spots that are unique to Puget Sound or representative of Washington in some way. With that said, there is a McDonald's coming to Concourse B in early June. It'll be the first one to arrive at Sea-Tac and one of the most requested options by passengers, according to the airport.

Here now, and updated guide to kick-off the start of the busy summer travel season. (You remember Monday is a holiday, right?). Not much has changed since the last update, with the exception of Beecher's Cheese, which joined the concourse family last November.

7) Ivar's Fish Bar: Ivar's is known for their chowder, and the smoked salmon and clam chowders here are the way to go. The Fish and Chips are cheaper than at Anthony's and are just as good. [Central Terminal]

[Photo: jpellgen/Flickr]

<http://seattle.eater.com/archives/2013/05/23/where-to-eat-at-seatac-international-airport-sea.php>