Two Washington Educators Earn Top Marks as “Teacher of the Year”

Ivar’s and Kidd Valley Restaurants awarded Lana Sumner of Broadview Thomson K-8 and Sergio Jara-Kessi of McDonald International School winners of the 2015 contest

SEATTLE – June 18, 2015 – For the past 12 years, Ivar’s and Kidd Valley Restaurants have called on Washington students to submit nominations detailing why their classroom leader should be recognized as “Teacher of the Year” and, every year entries pour in telling inspiring tales of creative teaching and mentoring. This year was no exception, and both local restaurants are pleased to announce Lana Sumner of Broadview Thomson K-8 and Sergio Jara-Kessi of McDonald International School as the grand prize winners.

In separate award ceremonies earlier this June, each teacher was presented with their winning prize package: $500 to put toward the purchase of class supplies, a commemorative plaque and the official title of “Teacher of the Year.” Each classmate of the nominating students received a tasty and educational treat in the form of an Ivar’s or Kidd Valley Kids Meal voucher and free admission tickets to the Pacific Science Center.

Fifth-grade student, Ava Fitzenrider, nominated Mrs. Sumner for the guidance and encouragement she gives her students, while still creating fun programming, like a science field trip to Bitter Lake, go kart building, and interactive geometry games. Mrs. Sumner also gives her students the tools to problem solve, inviting them to contribute to the year’s handbook and classroom rules, and by holding weekly class meetings.

Mr. Jara-Kessi (aka “Profe Sergio”) was nominated by his third-grade student, Noora Butorac, for his teachings in science, math and Spanish. Mr. Jara-Kassi pulls out all the stops to engage the kids, whether he’s telling math jokes, or singing and dancing about a lesson plan for the day. His classroom experiments on electricity, blending learning with fun, have made Noora want to become a scientist. He’s also been known to purchase classroom supplies and bring them in on his own (Noora has spotted him!), so there’s no doubt the prize will be put to good use.

Ivar’s and Kidd Valley also awarded two teachers each the first place prizes of a $150 gift card for class supplies.
